1. ——— Nature and value of suit as affecting joinder of causes of action—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 8. Under s. 8 of the Code of 1859 it was decided that the words "cognizable by the same Court" referred to the nature of the suit and not to its value, therefore a Principal Sudder Ameen was held to have jurisdiction under that section to try a suit for land and for mesne profits, the entire claim not exceeding his jurisdiction, although the value of the suit, so far as the claim was for land, was below the value cognizable by him. 17 W. R. 380

Sutto Churn Ghosal v. Obhoy Nund Doss
2 W. R. Act X, 31

In a case, however, where the plaintiff was the lessor, and the defendant the lessee, of certain land under an agreement whereby the defendant agreed to occupy the land for two years, and to deliver a certain quantity of paddy at four specified periods, defendant failed to deliver the paddy. In a suit for rent.—Held, that, although the plaintiff might have sued for each instalment of rent as it fell due, the aggregate of such unpaid instalments should be deemed one cause of action. Chockalinga Pillai v. Kumara Viruthalam . . 4 Mad. 334

3. ——— Suit for possession and for rent of a house.—A suit for possession of his house and for rent were held to be causes of action properly joined by a plaintiff in one suit. Jaggomohan Sahu v. Mani Lal Chowdhry

s.c. Jugo Mohun Sahoo v. Monee Lall Chowdhry . . . . . 11 W. R. 542

4. ——— Claims for a hundi and for money paid in excess of rent It was held that a claim for a hundi may be joined in one suit with a claim for the return of money paid in excess of rent due. Brojokishore Chowdhrain v. Khema Soonduree Dossee . 7 W. R. 409

Kinnoo Monee Debia v. Shoboram Sirkar
3 W. R. 128

5. ——— Separate suits relying on same title—Infringement of title. It is not the title, but the infringement of it, which constitutes the cause of action; and two suits are not necessarily brought upon the same cause of action merely because the title relied upon in both cases is one and the same. Jardine, Skinner & Co. v. Shama Soonduree Debia . . . 13 W. R. 196

6. ——— Suit for rent of two different portions of land. In a suit for rent as of a single howalah, where the defendants pleaded, and the Court found, that the lands constituted two howalahs it was held not to be necessary to dismiss the suit, if justice could be done between the parties on the other issues. Suroop Chunder Chowdhry v. Nimchand Chuckerbutty

7. ——— Different suits brought against divers persons—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 8. S. 8 of the old Code of 1859 prohibited by implication the joinder of divers causes of action against divers persons. Prahlad Sen v. Gopee Bebee . . 4 N. W. 40

9. ——— Suit for possession, for damages for refusal to register, and to enforce [illegible]

10. ——— Suit for possession of portion of property, and to set aside deeds relating to another portion—Misjoinder of causes of action. One of three widows of a Mahomedan sued the other two, together with her deceased husband's sons and other heirs, for possession of 18 out of 96 sehams of property left by the deceased, to which she was entitled by right of inheritance under the Mahomedan law; and to set aside two deeds of bai-mukasa, or gift in lieu of dower, one dated 28th July 1842, granted in favour of one widow over a part of the property in suit, and the other dated 14th March 1847, in favour of the other widow, over other portions of the same pro-

KOSELLA KOER v. BEHARY PATUCK 12 W. R. 70

13. ——— Direction to file separate plaints instead of one—Procedure—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 9. Where a plaintiff originally filed a plaint against the defendant and other persons, to invalidate a number of conveyances and sales, of which some had been confirmed by decrees, or had been made in execution of decrees, and which related to land in two separate zillahs, and the Subordinate Judge passed an order, purporting to be an order under s. 9 of the Civil Procedure Code, for the trial of the several causes of action

... case to file separate plaints was not within the scope of s. 9 of the Civil Procedure Code That section did not require the plaintiff to file separate plaints but provided for the separate trial of the several causes of action contained in the one plaint filed on the institution of a suit. RUTTA BEBEE v. DUMRU LALL . . . . 2 N. W. 153

14. — Requisites to give right to join—Jurisdiction of Court over both causes of action. The right to join in one suit two causes of action against a defendant cannot be exercised unless the Court to which the plaint is presented has jurisdiction over both causes of action. KHIMJI JIVRAJU SHETTU v. PURUSHOTUM JUTANI I. L. R. 7 Mad. 171

15. ——— Joinder of other suits with suits for recovery of immoveable property —Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s 44 S 44 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, does not forbid the joinder of several causes of action entitling the plaintiff to the recovery of immoveable property, but a joinder with such causes of action or other causes of action of a different character except in the cases therein specified CHIDAMBARA PILLAI v. RAMASAMI PILLAI . . I. L. R. 5 Mad 161

16. — Suit for specific performance and return of money advanced on agreement—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s 44—Misjoinder The plaintiffs sued for specific performance of an agreement in writing which set forth, inter alia, that the defendants had agreed to sell, etc, under "certain conditions as agreed upon." Part of the purchase-money had been advanced by the plaintiffs to the defendants, for which the defendants had given their promissory notes; and the plaint contained a prayer that the defendants be ordered to pay over the amount of the notes Held (affirming the decision of WILSON, J), that there was no misjoinder of causes of action within the meaning of s 44, rule (a), of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877) CUTTS v. BROWN I. L. R 6 Calc. 328

17. ——— Suit for administration and accounts of separate estate—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 44. The plaintiffs who were the widow and daughter of A, sued the executors of the will of A's father (B) for administration and account. There were four distinct subjects of claim in the plaint, viz., (1) the estate of A's great-grandfather, (2) the estate of A's grandfather, (3) the jewels and ornaments which formed the stridhan of A's mother which were in A's posses-

claimed the jewels and ornaments, which formed ants had been ancestral property in B's hands, (ii) for an account and administration, (iii) that the jewels and ornaments should be delivered up.

Held, that there was a misjoinder of causes of action, having regard to the provisions of rule (b), s. 44 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877). Part of the claim in the plaint was for a portion of A's estate, and was founded upon the plaintiff's alleged right as heir of A. The other portion of the claim in the plaint—viz., that relating to the ornaments—had no reference to A's estate, and was personal to the first plaintiff herself. ASHABAI v. TYEB HAJI RAHIMTULLA . . . I. L. R. 6 Bom. 390

18. ——— Suit for moveable and immoveable property—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 44. There is nothing irregular in seeking to recover moveable and immoveable property in the same suit if the cause of action is the same in respect of both. GIYANA SAMBANDHA PANDARA SANNADHI v. KANDASAMI TAMBIRAN I. L. R. 10 Mad. 375

19. ——— Suit for mortgage-debt with alternative prayer for sale—Civil Procedure Code, s. 44. A suit for recovery of a mortgage-debt with an alternative prayer for sale of the mortgaged property, is not a suit for recovery of immoveable property within the meaning of s. 44 of the Civil Procedure Code. A claim for arrears of rent therefore can be joined with a claim for recovery of a mortgage-debt with such an alternative prayer without leave of the Court first obtained. GOVINDA v. MANA VIKRAMAN. MANA VIKRAMAN v. GOVINDA . . . I. L. R. 14 Mad. 284

20. ——— Administration suit—Acts of maladministration regarding immoveable property outside jurisdiction—Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 44, rule (a). In an administration action the fact that amongst other things leases of immoveable property granted by the executors to themselves are sought to be set aside on the ground that such leases are acts of maladministration does not make the action one for the recovery of immoveable property, and leave under s. 44, rule (a), is not necessary. NISTARINI DASSI v. NUNDO LALL BOSE I. L. R. 26 Calc. 891
3 C. W. N. 670

21. ——— Misjoinder of causes of action—Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 44—Zamindari and appurtenant sir land sold by separate deeds—Suit for pre-emption of both zamindari and sir. Where a zamindari share and the sir land held with it were sold to the same vendee by two separate deeds of sale executed on the same day, it was held that a suit to pre-empt both the zamindari share and the sir land was not liable to be defeated on the ground of misjoinder of causes of action. AMBIKA DAT v. RAM UDIT PANDE
I. L. R. 17 All. 274

22. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 44—Suit by assignee of Mahomedan widow for part of her dower and for part of the estate of the widow's deceased husband. Held, that a suit by the assignee of a Mahomedan widow for the recovery of part of the assignor's dower, and of part of the estate of the assignor's late husband, did not contravene the provisions of s. 44, rule (b), of the Code of Civil Procedure. Ashabai v. *Tyeb Haji Rahimtulla, I. I. L. R. 18 All. 256

23. ——— Civil Procedure Code, ss. 31, 44—Misjoinder of defendants and causes of action—Suit by transferee from heir of deceased Mahomedan against another heir and transferee from such other heir. A plaintiff came into Court claiming a portion of the inheritance of a deceased Mahomedan on the allegation that he had, by two separate sale-deeds of different dates, purchased the property from two of the heirs of the deceased, and that the said property was withheld from him by another of the heirs of the deceased, who was in possession of some of it, and by certain transferees of other portions from the said heir. Both the remaining heir and the transferees from him were made defendants. Held, that there was no misjoinder of parties or of causes of action in such a suit. Indar Kuar v. Gur Prasad I. L. R. 11 All. 33, followed. With reference to the objection that the claim included both moveable and immoveable property, and that the leave of the Court for the joinder of the two claims had not been obtained, it was held that s. 44 of the Code of Civil Procedure did not apply to such a case. Giyana Sambandha Pandara Sannadhi v. *Kundasami Tambiran, I. Code, 1882, ss. 282, 283, 323, 555. At the Criminal Sessions of the High Court the trial of the accused had commenced before RAMPINI, J., and evidence partly had been gone into when His Lordship retired from the case under s. 555 of the Criminal Procedure Code and the case was adjourned without the jury being discharged. The Chief Justice, purporting to act under cl 13 of the Charter, appointed STEVENS, J., to preside at the trial of the accused In answer to a question by STEVENS, J, the standing counsel intimated that he intended proceeding with the trial from the point where it had been left. Whereupon it was contended on behalf of the accused that STEVENS, J, could not proceed with the trial as RAMPINI, J., and the jury empannelled before him had still the seisin of the case. 27. ——— Defective judgment—Appellate Court's judgment not supplementary to that of first Court—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss 367, 424—Practice. The judgment of an Appellate Court must show on the face of it that the case of each accused has been taken into consideration, and reasons should be given, as far as may be necessary, to indicate that the Court has directed judicial attention to the case of each accused. The Appellate Court's judgment cannot be read in connection with, and as supplementary to, the judgment of the Court of first instance, but just be quite independent and stand by itself JAMAIT MULLICK v. EMPEROR (1907) I. 42. ———— Cause of action arising on items of account—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 5—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 4 In the Civil Court of Berhampur, plaintiffs sued defendants for money due by one S, deceased. Defendants 1, 2, 3, and 4 were sued as heirs of the deceased, the fifth

The defendants, being ... agreement provided that the defendant company should forthwith execute an indenture of trust, in favour of trustees to be named by the plaintiffs, for the purpose of securing the said debentures, ... tures were duly prepared by the plaintiffs and approved by the defendants' solicitors in Bombay. The plaintiffs, having paid in Bombay the solicitor's bill of costs in respect of the preparation of the indenture and debentures, now sued to recover the amount from the defendants under the terms of the above agreement of 1894. The defendants contended that the Court had no jurisdiction, on the ground that they did not reside or carry on business in Bombay, and that no part of the cause of action arose in Bombay. Held, that the Court had jurisdiction. The agreement of August 1894 was signed in Bombay by the plaintiffs' agent on their behalf, and therefore part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction. Further, it appeared that it was intended that the payment to be made by the plaintiffs should be made in Bombay where both the plaintiffs' agent and solicitors resided. Held, also, that the plaintiffs were entitled to include in their claim the stamp duty paid on the trust-deed. same contractual effect as if they had been respectively written to and from the places to and from which they purported to be written:—Held, also, that the fact that the debt due from the insolvent firm to the plaintiffs, which the defendant had agreed to satisfy, had been contracted in Bombay would not give the Court jurisdiction independently of the stipulation, oral or documentary, by the defendants to pay in Bombay. It would be necessary for the plaintiffs to prove the existence of such debt as showing the nature and extent of the defendant's promise, but the existence of the debt would not constitute a part of the plaintiffs' cause of action. The grant of leave under cl 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865, is a judicial act which must be held to relate only to the cause of action contained in the plaint, as presented to the Court at the time of the grant. Such leave, which affords the very foundation of the jurisdiction, is not available to confer jurisdiction in respect of a different cause of action which was not judicially considered at the time it was granted In respect of such a different cause of action, leave under cl 12 cannot be granted after the institution of the suit; and therefore the Court cannot try such different cause of action, except in another suit duly instituted In suits upon hundis drawn outside the jurisdiction upon drawees within the jurisdiction, part of the cause of action arises outside the jurisdiction, and leave to sue under cl 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865, is therefore necessary for such suits RAMPURTAB SAMRUTHROY v PREMSUKH CHANDAMAL

Bank presented it to the defendant's firm at Bombay for acceptance, which was refused The Bank thereupon returned it to the plaintiff at Cawnpore, and it was never presented for payment. On the 16th June 1891, the plaintiff filed a suit upon the

The defendant contended that the Court had no jurisdiction, inasmuch as (a) the defendant was a foreigner, and at the date of suit did not carry on business in Bombay; and (b) no part of the cause of action (if any) had arisen in Bombay Held, (i) that, under the Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), the dishonour of a hundi, by non-acceptance, constitutes now, as it has always done, part of the cause of action in a suit against the drawer, (ii) that the Court had jurisdiction under cl 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865 RAM RAVJI JAMBHEKAR v PRALHADDAS SUBKARN

110. ——————— Letters Patent, High Court, cl 12—Part of cause of action arising on jurisdiction—Death of partner—Subsequent recovery of assets by surviving partner—Suit by administrator of deceased partner against surviving partner for recovered assets—Suit for partnership account In 1889 one H, a widow and a partner in a firm carrying on business in partnership with two persons, viz, G and B (defendants Nos 1 and 2), in Sind and at Behrin in the Persian Gulf, died, and the partnership was then dissolved. H had no children, but it was alleged that she had adopted one P, the brother of the second defendant. On the 13th

they denied that K was her heir, and alleged that P had performed her funeral ceremonies The matter came on as a suit on the 19th February 1894, when an order was made without prejudice to any of the questions raised by the issues, dismissing the application and ordering letters of administration

B (defendant No 2) had filed three suits in the High Court of Bombay, in the name of himself and G (defendant No. 1), as surviving partners of H's firm, to recover certain debts due to that firm. Disputes subsequently arose between B and G, and by a consent order of the 22nd July 1893 it was ordered that any moneys recovered in the said three suits should be paid over to a receiver (defendant No. 3), to be held by him until further order. On the 1st August 1895, consent decrees were passed in the appointed as above stated. He claimed to recover the whole sum paid to the receiver, alleging that the first and second defendants as her partners were largely indebted to the firm, and that the money really belonged to her estate. He prayed that the receiver might be directed to pay over the money to him, and that, if necessary, the partnership account should be taken. The second defendant (inter alia) pleaded that the suit was one for partnership accounts, and was barred by limitation, and also that the High Court of Bombay had no jurisdiction to try it. Held, that the Court had jurisdiction to hear the suit. The cause of action alleged was that the second defendant was endeavouring, under cloak of his position as surviving partner, to get into his hands a sum of money within the jurisdiction of the Court, with a view to deprive the representatives of his deceased partner of it, and to employ it for his own purposes. That was, at all events, part of the cause of action, and leave to sue had been obtained under cl 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865. Rivett-Carnac v. Goculdas Sobhanmull . . I. L. R. 20 Bom. 15

It appeared that all the moveable property and the greater part of the immoveable was in Benares, a portion only of the latter being within the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court. The application was granted on 31st May 1873, leave being reserved to the defendant to move to have this order set aside. The plaint was then filed. When the case came on for settlement of issues, the defendant questioned the jurisdiction of the High Court, and the Judge of the Court of original jurisdiction, who found that the defendant was in no way subject personally to its jurisdiction, withdrew the permission which had been granted to the plaintiff to institute the suit. Held, that, as the parties and witnesses resided in Benares, there was no reason why the suit should be tried in Calcutta, and as there was ample property within the jurisdiction of the Court at Benares to satisfy the maintenance, there was no necessity for its being declared to be a charge on the Calcutta property. Land Revenue Act) In 1885, the landholder brought a suit to recover from the tenant arrears of rent at the rate so fixed for a period antecedent to the Settlement Officer's order, as well as for the period subsequent thereto The lower Appellate Court dismissed the claim for rent, prior to the 1st July 1884, and decreed such as was due subsequently to that date, but without interest. Held, that the rent could not be fixed in the present suit, neither the Court of first instance nor the High Court having jurisdiction to fix it, and that the claim for rent for the period in question must therefore be dismissed Ram Prasad v *Dina Kuar, I L. 1. ——— Distinction between ancestral and self-acquired property among

Mahomedans a son is entitled to obtain partition of ancestral estate in his father's lifetime without his father's consent By the law and customs of Khoja Mahomedans there is a distinction between ancestral and self-acquired property in reference to the power of the owner to devise or make a gift thereof similar to that which obtains under the ordinary Hindu law The presumptions of the Hindu law apply to Khoja Mahomedans, and the burden of proving propositions opposed to that law lies on him who alleges them. Therefore in a suit for partition property in the father's hands, whether ancestral or self-acquired:—Held, that the burden of proving the issues framed upon these allegations lay on the defendant. In considering the question of the alleged custom and usages the Court adhered to the less stringent rule of proof applied in Hirbai v. Gorbai, 12 Bom 294 In the same suit where the defendant, having failed to establish the existence of the special custom and usages abovementioned, yet resisted the plaintiff's claim to partition on the ground that the property claimed was not ancestral:—Held, that the onus was on the plaintiff in the first instance to give evidence that the property was ancestral. In such cases the amount of the evidence required to shift upon the defendant the burden of displacing it depends on the circumstances of each case. Cassumbhoy Ahmedbhoy v Ahmedbhoy Habibhoy I. L. R. 12 Bom. 280

Held, on appeal, that the rule that Hindu law as administered in the Bombay Presidency, in the absence of proof of customs to the contrary, is the law applicable to Khoja Mahomedans, is not to be understood in its widest sense, but as confined to simple questions of inheritance and succession. The right of a son to partition in the lifetime of his father, more especially where moveable property is concerned, is one upon which the greatest doubt and difference of opinion has always prevailed, and consequently there is no presumption in favour of its inclusion in the Hindu law, which, in the absence of proof of custom to the contrary, is applicable to Khoja Mahomedans. The onus is on the party

it was proved to be customary in Kathiawar and Cutch for a father to give a son who wished for it his share of the family property, both ancestral and self-acquired. Held, also, on the evidence, that there was no sufficient proof of the property, of which the plaintiff sought partition, being ancestral property in the hands of his father. Where wealth amassed by an individual in trade is said to be ancestral in the hands of that individual, it is not enough to show that he inherited some property; it must be shown that the property inherited contributed in a material degree to the wealth so amassed. Ahmedbhoy Hubibbhoy v. Cassumbhoy Ahmedbhoy . . I. L. R. 13 Bom. 534

2. ——— Succession and inheritance—Marriage by Mahomedan rites—Hindu Law—Widow—Maintenance. Although a Khoja and his wife are married according to Mahomedan rites, yet at the time of his death, so far as regards the succession of his property he is a Hindu. If his brothers lived joint with him, his widow would be entitled to maintenance out of his estate, while his property devolved on them. According to Vyavahar Mayukh, which governs Khojas for the purpose of inheritance and succession, when a person inherits the estate of the deceased, he takes it as an universitas with all the rights and liabilities annexed to it Maintenance of those whom the deceased was bound to maintain and payment of his debts are liabilities, which are annexed to the estate in the hands of those who take it. compensation is fixed on the general principle of a sale of the land split up into parcels suitable for building, it is not only necessary but inappropriate to make a special deduction on account of the small area marked off for the roadway. Where the method of hypothetical development is employed for assessing compensation in conjunction with the method of ascertaining the present value of the land by reference to the prices realised by the sale of neighbouring lands, and the consequence is that the two methods lead to very much the same result, it follows not only that that result is entitled to so much the greater degree of confidence but also that the method of hypothetical development is itself corroborated In the method of arriving at a valuation of land by reference to prices

Where the talukhdar's interest is of a permanent character only regarding the duration and not regarding the rent payable, the zamindar has a much larger interest than to receive the capitalized value upon the rent reserved. When provisions of law are clear, it is not competent to Courts of Justice to enter into questions of natural justice; and, having regard to the economy and social conditions of the country, the provision that the Government should be the sole judge of what is likely to prove useful to the public is both expedient and useful. In making an acquisition, the wishes of the owner of the land are wholly irrelevant under the Act. There is no definition of a "public purpose" in the Land Acquisition Act, nor any limitation regarding what is likely to prove useful to the public: both matters are left to the absolute discretion of the Local Government, and it is not competent for this Court to assume to itself the jurisdiction to impose restrictions on this discretion by holding that at an inquiry under s. 40 of the Act the person whose land is intended to be acquired should have an opportunity to appear and object. This is a course wholly contrary to the policy of the Act. S. 40 of the Act constitutes the Government custodian of the public interests and sole judge as to whether the land is required for the construction of work and whether that work will prove useful to the public This Court is not competent to question the validity of the proceedings under s. 40 of the Act. It is not open to this Court to discuss the sufficiency of the inquiry made by the Collector, or his qualifications. The Local Government is sole judge S 41 of the Land Acquisition Act makes the Government sole judge of the manner in which the public are to have the use of the land taken up. A Collector holding an inquiry under the Land Acquisition Act is not a judicial officer, nor is the proceeding before him a judicial proceeding. He acts as the agent of the Government for the purpose of acquisition, clothed with certain powers to require the attendance of persons to make statements relevant to the matters which he has to inquire into. Durga Dass Rakhit v. *Queen Empress, I. Act (Bom Act IV of 1898)—Valuation by Collector —Acquisition of interest by claimant after Collector's award—References to the Tribunal of Appeal—Consolidation of references The Government of Bombay, acting on behalf of the Improvement Trustees, under the City of Bombay Improvement Act (Bombay Act IV of 1898), notified for acquisition nine parcels of land in December 1898. At the date of the notification, J the owner of the parcels, was in unencumbered possession of only one of them; and the remaining parcels were let on permanent leases as building sites Between the dates of notification and acquisition, J bought out the interests of the tenant in one of the parcels. The situation of the land was such that the whole plot consisting of the nine parcels was capable of forming a valuable quarry. The Collector in assessing compensation dealt with all the parcels separately; and refused compensation on a quarrying basis. As regards the seven parcels, the award was arrived at on a rental basis In all nine cases, references were claimed and made to the Tribunal of Appeal constituted under section 48 of the City of Bombay Improvement Act (Bombay Act IV of 1898) After the Collector had made his award and before the references were heard, J bought out the tenants' rights in the seven parcels. J next applied to the Tribunal of Appeal for consolidation of the references into one this was allowed The Tribunal of Appeal allowed J's claim for compensation for the whole land on a quarrying basis On appeal, it was objected that the consolidation was wrongly allowed, for J was thereby permitted to advance a claim—namely the claim to the quarrying value—which otherwise he would not have been able to make :—Held, that the consolidation was rightly allowed and had not the effect which was contended for It was not by reason of the consolidation of references that J was enabled to put forward what might be called the quarrying claim. that claim was already before the Collector and the Tribunal, and, whether good or bad, had to be decided on quite other grounds than the arbitrary division of the land made by the Collector. Held, further, that compensation should not be assessed on a quarriable basis, for the land was never a marketable quarry at the material time, and did not become so till after the Collector had made his award. Per BATCHELOR, J —For the purposes of ascertaining the market value of land under section 23 of the Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), the Court must proceed upon the assumption that it is the particular piece of land in question that has to be valued including all interests in it Collector of Belgaum v. Bhimrao, 10 Bom L R 657, followed The method contemplated by the Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894) for that value among the persons interested. The "market value of the land" means the price which would be obtainable in the market for a concrete parcel of land with its particular advantages and its particular drawbacks, both advantages and drawbacks being estimated rather with reference to commercial value than with reference to any abstract legal rights. Per HEATON, J. :—Taking the scope of the Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894) and its words, it seems that in ascertaining compensation for land taken up neither the method of valuing each interest in it separately nor the method of valuing the land as a whole and then apportioning to each person interested the share to which he is entitled, is excluded. What is intended is a fair and reasonable estimate of the compensation

These had been given in suits brought by the successor of the ghatwal which had been resisted by the first defendants' ancestors on the ground of their having had fixity of tenure. Held, that they could be received as evidence of long anterior possession at a rent, and of the title on which the defendants now relied, having been openly asserted long ago Taken with other evidence, they established possession by the defendants at a uniform rent paid to the zamindar, thus leading to the inference that the tenure had been, and still was, of a permanent character RAM RANJAN CHAKERBATI v RAM NARAIN SINGH

There is nothing which makes it a necessary inference that a tenancy in Calcutta is a tenancy by the year, in the absence of any special agreement to the contrary So far as there is any custom in Calcutta, or any inference of fact to be drawn from mere occupation accompanied by payment of a monthly rent, it is that the tenancy is a monthly one NOCOORDASS MULLICK v JEWRAJ BABOO . 12 B. the landlord to give effect to such promise or expectation. This was the principle of the decision in Gregory v. Mighell, 18 Ves 328; and, as I conceive, is open to no objection " A canal bringing water from the Sutlej to tracts till then watered only by rain was sanctioned by Government, to be made, in the greater part, upon their waste land, at the expense of the predecessor in estate of the who frequented the above tracts for pasturage and sparse cultivations Held, that the undertakers acquired a proprietary interest in so much of the Government lands, taken for the purpose of the canal, as was required for its construction and maintenance, and acquired also a right to have the waters of the Sutlej admitted into the canal so long as it was used for the purpose of irrigating the tracts. The canal having been completed, and the lease of the customary use having come to an end with the termination of the current settlement, the son obtained from Government a grant of an estate assessed to the revenue in the tracts within reach of the irrigation, together with an inam of R5,000 a year for two lives Afterwards, in a sanad, stating the grant of this estate, Government expressly reserved the right to take possession and control of the canal and to manage the irrigation for as long as they wished, without paying compensation This possession was taken. This suit was brought for a declaration of the rights acquired by the makers of the canal, and for other relief, on the title of their descendants, the plaintiffs. Held, that, at the date of the grant of the estate, the maker had already a proprietary interest in the canal, and a right to take water from the Sutlej, so long as the canal should be used for the purpose for which it was designed, namely, the benefit of the tracts which it traversed Also, that the effect of the reservation of the grant was that Government could assume the control of the canal and the irrigation without being in the position of receivers, managers or trustees for the proprietors or accountable to them for the profits. The reservation did not empower Government to confiscate the canal, nor did they acquire any proprietary

22. ——— Digging well or planting trees without permission—Ejectment—Forfeiture of lease as for breach of condition. The act of digging a well or planting trees may not necessarily imply or assert a proprietary right in the land in which the well is dug or the trees are planted, yet by the general law of the North-West Provinces a raiyat, even having a right of occupancy, being prohibited from doing certain acts, such as planting of trees or digging wells, without his landlord's consent makes himself liable to ejectment, unless protected by local usages, from his holding, if he were to dig a well or plant trees without the landlord's consent. S. 6, Act X of 1859, which provides that a raiyat who has held or cultivated the land for more than twelve years acquires a right of occupancy in it so long as he pays rent for the same, must be read consistently with cl. 5, s. 23 of that enactment, is at liberty to use and deal with the land as he pleases. The useful or beneficial nature of an act is not a justification of it if it be a breach of contract. A condition not expressly made between the parties to a contract may nevertheless be attached to such contract by custom. The general rule that a raiyat is liable to ejectment on the digging of a well without the consent of the zamindar may be varied by particular local usage or express contract. 2. ———— Condition for forfeiture—Concurrent remedies for breach of conditions in lease—Damages. There is nothing incompatible in the two remedies of damages and forfeiture for breach of the conditions of a lease. Here there is an obligation (as in this case by a lessee) to do several successive acts, the obligation is broken if any one of the acts is omitted when the time for its performance comes. The lessor is not obliged to wait until the expiration of the term; nor is the lease liable to several successive suits for each partial breach of the condition, and then to one general penalty for the whole. Nor is it usual, when a penalty is provided for breach of condition, to bring two suits—one to enquire into the existence of the breach, and the other to enforce the penalty. in Malabar were demised on anubhavom tenure. Some of them were alienated by the tenant, but the landlord subsequently accepted rent. More than twelve years after the alienation, the landlord sued to eject the tenant on the ground that the tenure was thereby forfeited. In a suit brought after a notice to quit, which was found to be invalid, to eject the defendant, and for a declaration that he had no such permanent howladari tenure as he alleged, the defendant again set up the howaldari lease under which he admitted he had paid a fixed rent to the plaintiff Held, that, though the defendant repudiated the particular holding which the plaintiff attributed to him, he did not question the plaintiff's right to receive the rent and therefore did not in any sense repudiate his landlord's title. What he did amounted merely to questioning the right of the landlord to enhance the rent, which was not such a disclaimer as would result in law in a forfeiture of his tenure. The plaintiff therefore was not entitled to eject the defendant without giving him a proper notice to quit. *Vivian v. Moat, L. Land Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879) only declares the customary common law on the subject of relinquishment of tenancy. surrendering either the whole or part of the land included in the lease, with a deduction to be made in the rent for the extent of the land that might be found on measurement to have been surrendered Held, that this privilege could only be exercised by the other of 9 bighas. Held, that, according to the true construction of the contract, there was error in the judgment of the High Court which decided that the retention of the plots did not altogether deprive the relinquishment of its effect. This retention did more than lessen the area actually surrendered. It was a mistake to suppose that an increased rent to be paid by the relinquishing tenant in proportion to the areas retained and surrendered, respectively, would adjust the point disputed as a matter of law The contract was that, in case the tenant surrendered a part, the future rent was to be ascertained by the measurement of the area relinquished. To have made a new surrender would have been within the competency of surrender, but not surrendered Therefore the surrender upon which rested the defence to a suit by the lessor for the full rent was invalid in law. RAMCHURN SINGH v RANIGANJ COAL ASSOCIATION I. L. R. 26 Calc. 29 L. R. 25 I. A. 210 2 C. W. N. 697

The plaintiff, who was a lessee of the land under the Matwali of the Hooghly Imambara, alleged that the defendant was merely a tenant-at-will, and that the transmissions were not recognized by his [illegible] construction of those documents there was at the date of them an "istifa," or surrender, of the land to the landlord by the former tenant. No document of surrender was produced:—Held (reversing the decision of the High Court), that on the true construction of the pottah and kabuliyat (which referred to a deed of sale to the defendant's predecessor of the same date and spoke of the jumma as "according to former custom and practice") no more was implied than that the seller acknowledged that he had parted with the land. No inference of a surrender by the tenant could be made from them, but they attested the landlord's recognition of the transmission of the property by an instrument purporting to convey a permanent inheritable right, and taken, with the other facts of the case, they established the defendant's title. In such cases the question is whether the true inference from the facts is that the tenure is permanent or precarious, the burden of proof being on the tenant. Act I of 1880), ss. 20, 21, 22—Decision of Survey Officer as to nature of tenure.* Where a tenant under a plea of ownership has succeeded in obtaining a possessory order in a suit before a Mamlatdar, it is not necessary for the evicted landlord to give notice to quit before suing in ejectment on his title. It would be otherwise where the possessory order was sought on the ground of a disturbance of an existing tenancy. The plaintiffs were khots and defendants were their yearly tenants in occupation of their khoti khasgi lands. In 1890, the Survey officer purporting to act under s. 20 of the Bombay Khoti Act (Bombay Act I of 1880) decided that defendants were occupancy tenant but the plaintiffs did not come to know of this decision till 1893, when the botkhat was prepared and signed. Shortly afterwards the plaintiffs took forcible possession of the lands. Thereupon the defendants filed a suit in the Mamlatdar's Court to recover possession, alleging that they were owners of the land, and that they had been illegally dispossessed. The Mamlatdar restored them to possession. In 1896, plaintiffs filed the present suit to eject defendants. Defendants pleaded (inter alia) that the suit was bad for want of notice to quit, and that the claim was time-barred. Held, that, defendants having distinctly repudiated the landlord's title in the possessory suit, were not entitled to a notice to quit. She died the following year (1886) The defendants continued in possession of the property under the lease and expended money in improvements In 1892, the plaintiff as purchaser from the adopted son sued for possession Held, that he was entitled to recover and to have the lease set aside, but only on payment to the defendants of compensation for the sum properly expended by them in improving the land after the widow's death. The lease granted by the widow was not ipso facto void, but only voidable by the plaintiff, on her death. It did not necessarily determine at her death. That being the legal position of the defendants, the plaintiff allowed the defendants to go on improving the property, and took no steps to warn the defendants until he brought this suit to recover possession His conduct was such as to induce a belief in the minds of the defendants that the lease would be treated as valid There was not merely a lying by, but a lying by under such circumstances as to induce a belief that a voidable lease would be treated as valid. But as to the residue of the land in the hands of the plaintiff, and to which as against the talukhdar the plaintiff was entitled, the Court could not interfere with the rate of assessment fixed upon it by the Government. There not being any specific limit fixed by law, grant, sanad, contract, or otherwise, to the assessment of that residue for the purpose of land revenue, the Civil Courts had no jurisdiction to regulate such assessment, even if, having regard to the value of the land, it were excessive. to be inferred, as to an extensive tract of forest, from the payment and receipt of some insignificant sum—e g., a moiety of the rent realized on a small number of acres—which may most naturally be referred to rateability, or the mere participation by the State, according to an immemorial rule, in all profits arising from the land. As there must be certainty in a grant as to the area conferred, so there must be certainty as to the area, or, at least, as to identity of the object occupied, if the occupation is to raise the presumption of a grant, or of acquiescence in a definite occupation. It is not inconsistent with this principle, but rather as complementary to it, that the farther rule is accepted, that the possession and the ownership springing from possession of a farm or varg as a whole, and within the limits as to which certainty is attainable, are not prevented or destroyed by an undoubted encroachment, or by a want of certainty as to some particular plot of ground or as to the precise delimitation here or there of its proper boundary line A suit to ascertain boundaries does not imply that prescription. Under these conditions, a true owneriff established any exclusive possession of, or proprietary right in, any part of the forest claimed; while the evidence showed a continued and consistent exercise, on behalf of the Government, of its proprietary right over the timber and even the firewood in the forests in dispute from the time that the assertion of the right became a matter of appreciable consequence, and that the plaintiff's family knew this, and submitted to it, and them-ownership of Government. That ownership had not been parted with at all in the opinion of the parties most interested. If it had been parted with and become vested in the plaintiff's ancestors as an integral portion of the estate in the land which the plaintiff claimed was theirs, then the assumption and the exercise of ownership by the Government over the trees from 1841 down to the filing of the suit was itself a perpetual ouster of the family from a portion of their estate, and would constitute a complete eviction of the owner as such. If there was such an ouster proved as to the whole by a multiplicity of acts bearing on the several parts of the estate, but all referrible to the same principle or purpose, then the plaintiff had a cause of action in the nature of ejectment so soon as he was disturbed in his possession by any of these acts, in their legal nature such as to contradict and annihilate his right throughout the estate, even though their immediate physical incidence was on but particular parts of it—a kumri cultivation, and to reclamation and disposal at his own mere will, as parts, so far as the right was concerned, of a single legal unit, the cause of action had arisen more than twelve years before the institution of the suit The plaintiff's right, so far the advantages conferred by the grants, and on an assertion of rights which, if the grants were to be construed as the plaintiff desired, called for immediate action in the Court on his part The claim was also contradicted by a series of transactions in which the Government officers disposed, from time to time, of portions of land included within the confines of the estate which the plaintiff claimed. It is the possibility of referring the exaction levied to some particular area, shown to have been actually and exclusively held by the taxpayer, either by extrinsic evidence, or by that of the Government accounts themselves, that makes the payment and receipt of a tax a practical assertion and admission of private owner-

one system would be necessarily regarded as contradictions of any ownership over the object on which they were exercised except that from which they spring may, under another system, be quite compatible with an ownership subsisting unimpaired side by side with the limited right to which they would be attributed. I of 1880, s. 9.* The khots of the village of A in 1854 leased certain land to B by a lease which declared that "you (B) are to enjoy, you and your sons, grandsons, from generation to generation." The rent fixed by the lease was eleven maunds and six and a-half pallis of bhat per year. B having died, his widow in 1878 transferred the lease to the plaintiff, who entered into possession and offered to pay to the defendants, who were khots of the village and the successors of the grantors of the lease in 1854, the annual rent fixed by the lease. The defendant refused to accept it and contended that the plaintiff was liable to pay the rent paid by other occupying tenants in the village The plaintiff thereupon sued to have it declared that he was entitled under the lease to hold the lands permanently at the rent thereby fixed. Held, by the High Court, that he was entitled to the declaration. The lease was one to hold in perpetuity at the fixed rent, but there were no words making the lease inalienable There was no

56. ———— Covenant for renewal—Ambiguous covenant—Right to remove soil and open mines—Interpretation by acts of the parties—Estoppel—Confirmation—Land Acquisition Act, X of 1870. A lease for ninety-nine years made in 1794 by the East India Company to W contained a covenant that the said Company, upon application of the heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns of the said W, would re-grant and renew the said lease thereby made "on the terms and conditions above mentioned," etc Held, that the above covenant was not a covenant for perpetual renewal of the lease, but [illegible] The above [illegible] ors, ad- [illegible] "with [illegible] en and [illegible] his own occupation or possession." It was contended that this clause, if not on the face of it granting the right to remove and sell the soil, was, at all events, ambiguous, and had been interpreted by the subsequent conduct of the parties themselves, who had always recognized the right of the holders of the lease to the soil and stones of the land in question. It appeared that in 1864 the holders of the lease had permitted the E Company to enter upon the land and to remove the earth and stones of the hill for purposes of reclamation; and that on May 10th, 1870, an indenture had been executed to which the Secretary of State, the E. Company, and all persons interested in the lease were parties, which indenture recited the above facts and contained mutual releases by the persons interested in the lease, the E Company, and the Secretary of State in respect of any claims that might be made against any of them on account of the excavation of the said hill and the removal of the earth and stones therefrom The said indenture also contained a confirmation, by the Secretary of State, of the lease of 1794 A schedule to the indenture described the property comprised in the lease and specified (inter alia) the "quarries situated at Bhandarvada Hill." Held, that the words of the lease of 1794 were not ambiguous, and gave no right to remove the soil and stones, and that the acts of the parties could not be admitted to affect the cons- [illegible] poranea expositio" Even if the words quarries or mines had been used in the lease of 1794, they would have given no right to work quarries or mines other than those open when the tenant came in, which moreover he might have worked in the absence of such words. To allow the opening of new quarries or mines, an express power to that effect must be given Held, also, that the Secretary of State was not estopped by the indenture of May 10th, 1870, from disputing the claimant's right to remove the soil and stones. The claimant's position had not been altered so as to make it inequitable in the Secretary of State now to assert his claims under the lease Held, also, that the indenture of May 10th, 1870, did not operate as a fresh demise of the premises in their condition at the date of the indenture. 57. ———— Kabuliat, construction of—Stipulation as to rent of new chur—Hawaladari tenure—Measurement and assessment of chur land—Landlord and tenant—Beng. Act VIII of 1869, s 14 A kabuliat, executed by the tenant of land held in hawala tenure, provided that on an adjoining chur becoming fit for cultivation the whole land, old and new, held by the tenant should be measured, and the old having been deducted from the total, rent should be paid for the excess [illegible] settled with others Such a chur having been formed, the zamindar measured without notice to, and in the absence of, the hawaladar. He then served a notice on the latter requiring him to execute a kabuliat within fifteen days for payment of a fixed rent upon the excess land as found by the measurement, or to yield up possession. Disregard of this led to a suit in which the zamindar claimed either khas possesion or rent on measurement by order of Court Held, that neither the kabuliat nor the terms of s. 14 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869 precluded a suit for assessment of the rent upon measurement; nor did the absence of authentic measurement as prescribed by the kabuliat have that effect, or affect the measurement by the Amin; but that, until both the measurement and the assessment of the rent had taken place (which might be either in the manner prescribed or by judicial termination) the zamindar could not put the hawaladar to his choice between (b) executing a kabuliat for the rent and (c) yielding up possession. A Court of Equity in England only assumes jurisdiction in relation to land abroad, when as between the litigants or their predecessors some privity or relation is established on the ground of contract, trust or fraud, but in no case does a Court of Equity entertain a suit, even if the defendant is within the limits of its jurisdiction, where the purpose is to obtain a declaration of title to foreign land. Though it is a general principle that the title to land should ordinarily be determined by the Court within the limits of whose jurisdiction it lies, it is no doubt open to the Legislature to disregard that principle. But the Courts certainly would not lean towards a construction involving that result, where the words of the Legislature are fairly capable of a meaning in conformity with the general principle The phrase " suit for land " in s. 12 of the Letters Patent is by no means limited to a suit for the recovery of land: the expression is not to be read with a technical limitation, which had never been associated with it VAGHOJI KUVERJI v. CAMAJI BOMANJI (1905)

Accounts were sent and advices were transmitted from Phulgaon to the plaintiff in Bombay and from Bombay by the plaintiff to the defendants at Phulgaon Subsequently the plaintiffs having applied for leave under clause 12 of the Letters Patent brought a suit in the High Court at Bombay to recover the amount due from the defendants at the foot of the accounts between himself as principal and the defendants as commission agents at

If any of these material facts have taken place within the jurisdiction of the Court, then leave can be given under clause 12 of the Letters Patent But if no such material facts have taken place within the jurisdiction of the Court and leave is given, then it is open to the defendants to contend at the hearing that the court has no jurisdiction. The action was for [illegible] service of summons and pursuant to a chamber order of 22nd December 1904, the plaint was on the 7th January 1905 amended by the addition of the names of Messrs Wallace, Ashton, Greenway, Hue and Meakin. The first four were at the date of plaint and even afterwards carrying on business: and Secherau, one of the partners, having died in the meanwhile, his executor Meakin was also added as a party defendant. Before the death of Secherau, the partnership took in a new partner: and this new partnership opened a branch office in Bombay. Prior, however, to the presentation of the plaint leave was granted under clause 12 of the Letters Patent. It was objected on behalf of the firm that leave under clause 12 should not have been granted: that the order allowing the amendment was wrong and that the Court had no jurisdiction to receive the suit:—Held, (i) that Messrs Wallace, Ashton, Greenway and Hue, according to the allegations in the plaint, were liable as co-partners to the plaintiffs and none the less because the estate of the deceased co-partner might also be liable together with them. sale, otherwise the purchaser was to pay warehouse rent for the quantity then afterwards to be delivered The purchaser paid the purchase-money, and received permits for the delivery of the salt, which was delivered to him in various quantities down to the year 1831, in which year an inundation took place which destroyed the salt in the warehouse and there remained no salt to satisfy the contract. The purchaser petitioned the vendors for a return of the purchase-money, which was refused, on the ground that the loss happened through his negligence in not sooner clearing the salt from the warehouse. An enquiry, however, took place at the instance of the Government who referred the matter to the Salt Collector. The Collector did not make his report till the year 1838, and upon that report the Government refused to return the purchase-money claimed in respect of the deficient salt. The purchaser then brought an action of assumpsit for recovery of the purchase-money of such part of the salt as had not been delivered, alleging, as a breach, the non-delivery thereof. 40. ——— Forfeiture of rebel's property. A Hindu widow in possession of a six-annas zamindari share of her husband's sold the share in 1855 to persons who in 1858 were convicted of rebellion, and their estates, including the share, were confiscated by Government. The share was granted to other persons as a reward for loyalty, and remained in their possession until 1886, when a suit for possession and mesne profits was brought, just before the expiry of twelve years from the widow's death, by a reversioner to her husband's estate on the ground that the sale of 1855 could not affect more than the widow's life-interest, and that nothing more had been confiscated by the Government in 1858 and granted to the defendants. The plaintiff had taken no steps in 1855 to question the sale, or in 1858 to assert his claims as reversioner. Held, that the suit was barred by s 20 of Act IX of 1859 Ramdhun v. Bhawanee Singh, 3 Agra 139, Bhugwan Das v. *Banee Dalal, 2 S D. 18. —————— "Plaint"—Suit filed before period of limitation expired, but stamp duty not paid till afterwards—Court Fees Act, 1870, s. 28—Exclusion of time of proceeding bonâ fide in Court without jurisdiction. Two suits were brought for partition of the property of a deceased by his heirs under the Mahomedan Law—the first, by his widow and six children in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, the second by two other children by his first wife, in the Court of the District Munsif, from which Court it was transferred to the Court of the said Subordinate Judge. The Subordinate Judge having ruled that the plaintiffs in each suit were not entitled to sue jointly, the were unstamped. Six of them, presented by the widow's children, stated explicitly that the duty payable thereon was included in that already paid on the widow's plaint, which sum correctly re-at first treated at the Munsif's Court as being duly stamped, though payment of fresh Court-fees was subsequently ordered after the expiration of the period of limitation. The deceased had died in 1882; the two original suits had been filed in 1893 and 1894, respectively—within entertain a suit combining causes of action which could not be combined, being covered by the words "from other cause of a like nature,"—in s. 14 of the Limitatiom Act That with reference to the widow's amended suit, inasmuch as her original suit (on behalf of herself and her six children) had been filed before the period of limitation had expired and had been prosecuted diligently and in good faith, the time during which that original suit had been pending must be deducted, and her amended suit held to be not barred. That for similar reasons a like deduction should be made in favour of the six fresh suits of her children (unless a contrary decision were necessitated by the fact that their plaints had remained unstamped until after the expiration of the extended period of limitation). Per SUBRAMANIA AYYAR, J., that although an amount equal to the fees properly payable in respect of the widow's amended suit, and of the six fresh suits filed by her children had in fact been paid on the joint suit originally filed, credit could not be claimed out of that original payment for the Court-fees due on the six fresh suits subsequently instituted. These plaints must therefore be considered to have been not duly stamped, if not entirely un-tion had expired, did not render them time-barred, since the plaints must be regarded as having been presented on the day upon which they were filed It cannot be inferred from the Limitation Act, 1877, that the word "plaint" as used in s 4, explanation, means "plaint duly stamped" A "plaint" in law means merely "a private memorial tendered to a Court, in which the person sets forth his cause of action: the exhibition of an action in writing" Whether any Court-fee is payable in an action commenced by the plaint, and if so when and how it should be paid, are matters that are foreign to the question whether the document is a plaint or not The Court Fees Act and the Limitation Act are entirely different in their purpose and scope, and neither can be taken to control or qualify the other. Per DAVIES, J., that, inasmuch as the order of the Subordinate Judge requiring separate plaints was erroneous, it could not operate to enhance the Court-fees truly so as to validate the original presentation, unless it has been done by order made under the second paragraph of s 28 of the Court Fees Act. In the case of a High Court, such an order can be made only by a Judge, and by him only in cases "of mistake or inadvertence" These words mean mistake or inadvertence on the part of the Court or its officers, and not on the part of the appellant or its advisers. The expression "head of the office" in s. 28 does not refer to the head of the office of a Court, or at all events to the head of the office of a High Court, acting not as such, but as a taxing officer; but it refers to the head of a public office such as the Board of Revenue The officer mentioned in s 5 of the Court Fees Act is not bound to advise parties as to the stamp required under the Act, or to give them notice that they have not sufficiently stamped documents which the Act requires to be stamped before presentation A plaint contained a prayer for a declaration (i) that certain property was the joint property of the plaintiff, and (ii) that it was not liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree held by one of the defendants against another ; and, as foundation for the latter relief, alleged collusion, fictitious transactions, and want of title.

For some years before his death S was left in exclusive management. Subsequently the defendants were in sole management of the temple until 1891, when the plaintiffs brought the present suit charging that the defendants had excluded them from the right of management, and claiming that they should make good sums lost to the institution by reason of breaches of trust alleged to have been committed by them. Some of the breaches of trust took place before 1884. Of the others, which took place subsequently, some consisted in improper dealings with the temple property to the detriment of the temple and to the advantage of certain relatives of the defendants. The plaintiffs also asked for an injunction to restrain the defendants from excluding them from management. Held, (i) that in the absence of evidence of an absolute denial by the defendants of the plaintiff's right to act as trustees, the suit for an injunction was not barred by limitation; (ii) that the suit could not be regarded as a suit by the beneficiaries, and was not within the operation of the Limitation Act, s. 10; (iii) that the suit was not maintainable in respect of breaches of trust committed in the lifetime of the deceased manager, as being to that extent barred by limitation, and also for the reason that such breaches were not more imputable to the defendants than to the plaintiffs; (iv) that even if it had been proved that the community interested in the temple had sanctioned the acts of the defendants now complained of, that circumstance would not suffice to excuse the defendants; (v) that the defendants were liable to make good the loss occasioned by any breach of trust committed within six years of the date when the suit was instituted even in the absence of fraud, and that, in estimating such loss, prospective loss should be assessed. It was found as a fact that Government had been in possession of the rights to which the suit related for upwards of fifty years, and during that time no acknowledgment of their title to khotship had been made either to plaintiffs or their predecessors. Held, that the claim was time-barred; Government not being in possession or control of the village as stake-holder, s. 10 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) was not applicable, they not holding the village "in trust for a specific purpose" within the meaning of that section. The date of the decree or order is the date on which judgment is pronounced. The time excluded from the period of limitation by s 12 of the Limitation Act must be taken to commence only when the party appealing does something in order to obtain the copy of the judgment or decree, and to end when he obtains the copy. A party who delays to apply for such copy is not entitled to exclude the period of such delay. A party is at liberty to apply for a copy of the decree, whether the decree has been signed or not If he has applied, but the copy cannot be prepared because the decree has not been signed, then this time and the time taken up in preparing the copy will be excluded, but so long as he has made no application, the non-signature of the decree can have no effect at all upon him. An application for a copy of the judgment under appeal was made by the appellants on the 28th March, and the 29th March was fixed by the office as the date when the estimate of the cost of such copy was to be delivered, and it was delivered on that day. The estimate was not complied with until the 5th April when the appellants put in the necessary stamp paper according to the estimate. Upon the entry of the stamp paper no intimation was made by the office to the appellants as to when the copy would be ready for delivery. 72. ——— Exclusion of time of proceeding bonâ fide in Court for a cause of like nature to want of jurisdiction. The plaintiff, on the 31st March, 1884, brought a suit in the Small Cause Court on a promissory note, dated the 24th April, 1879. In his plaint he omitted to set out certain payments of interest by the defendant, which payments (if so set out) would have had the effect of saving the suit from being barred by limitation The Judge of the Small Cause Court held that, on the face of the plaint, the suit was barred, and rejected the plaint on the 24th April, 1884, under cl (c) of s. 54 of the Civil Procedure Code On the 25th April, 1884, the plaintiff brought a fresh suit on the same promissory note, and in his plaint set out how it was that he claimed exemption from limitation Held, that, in computing the period of limitation, the plaintiff was not entitled, under s 14 of Act XV of 1877, to exclude the time during which he was prosecuting the previous suit NOBIN CHUNDER KURR v. ROJOMOYE DOSSEE . I. The plaintiff's manager brought a suit in his own name against the defendants for the value of the trees so cut and carried away. The suit was dis-contended that the time occupied in the former suit ought to be excluded in computing the period of limitation prescribed for the second suit. Held, that the provisions of Act XV of 1877, s. 14, did not apply, and that the time could not be excluded, as the reason why the previous suit was dismissed was, because it was brought in the name of the wrong person, not from defect of jurisdiction, or from any cause of a like nature. 77. ——— Multifariousness and misjoinder of parties—"Other cause of a like nature" to defect of jurisdiction—Error in procedure. In cases in which s. 14 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, is pleaded as protecting the plaintiff from the bar of limitation, if there was an inability in the Court to entertain the former suit produced by any cause not connected in any way with want of good faith or due diligence in the plaintiff, that cause is of like nature to defect of jurisdiction within the meaning of s 14 It is not necessary that the cause which prevented the former Court from entertaining the suit should be a cause which was independent of, and beyond the control of, the plaintiff. Hence, where the inability of the Court to entertain the former suit arose from misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action, and there was on the plaintiff's part in the former suit no want of good faith or due diligence, the plaintiff was held entitled to the benefit of the time during which he was prosecuting the former suit, that is, from the time when the plaint in that suit was filed until the time when it was returned to the plaintiffs for amendment. *Chunder Madhub Chuckerbutty v. Suit by administrator of deceased partner against surviving partner for recovered assets—Suit for partnership account—Form of decree. In 1889 one H a widow and a partner in a firm carrying on business in partnership with two persons, viz, G and B (defendants Nos. 1 and 2), in Sind and at Behrin in the Persian Gulf, died, and the partnership was then dissolved. H had no children, but it was alleged that she had adopted one P, the brother of the second defendant. On the 13th February, 1890, the guardian of one K, a minor (H's husband's nephew), applied to the High Court of Bombay for letters of administration to her estate alleging that K was her heir and next of kin A caveat was filed by her father and others, in which they denied that K was her heir, and alleged that P had performed her funeral ceremonies The matter came on as a suit on the 19th February, 1894, when an order was made, without prejudice to any of the questions raised by the issues, dismissing the application and ordering letters of administration to H's estate to issue to the Administrator General of Bombay. Letters of administration were accordingly granted to him on the 30th March, 1894. In the meantime, however, viz., on the 12th April, 1893, B (defendant No. 2) had filed three suits in the High Court of Bombay, in the name of himself and G (defendant No 1), as surviving partners of H's firm, to recover certain debts due to that firm. On the 13th February, 1890, the guardian of one K, a minor (H's husband's nephew), applied to the High Court of Bombay for letters of administration to her estate alleging that K was her heir and next of kin A caveat was filed by her father and others, in which they denied that K was her heir, and alleged that P had performed her funeral ceremonies The matter came on as a suit on the 19th February, 1894, when an order was made, without prejudice to any of the questions raised by the issues, dismissing the application and ordering letters of administration to H's estate to issue to the Administrator General of Bombay. Letters of administration were accordingly granted to him on the 30th March, 1894 In the meantime, however, viz., on the 12th April, 1893, B (defendant No. 2) had filed three suits in the High Court of Bombay, in the name of himself and G (defendant No 1), as surviving partners of H's firm, to recover certain debts due to that firm. Disputes subsequently arose between B and G, and by a consent order of the 22nd July, 1893, it was ordered that any moneys recovered in the said three suits should be paid over to a receiver (defendant No 3), to be held by him until further order On the 1st August, 1893, consent decrees were passed in the above three suits for a total sum of R28,335, which was forthwith handed over to the receiver. 11. ——— Landlord and tenant—Sale by landlord of land held by tenant—Fraud in such sale—Suit by purchaser against tenant—Plea by tenant impeaching sale by his landlord. The defendant was tenant of the lands in dispute under a lease, dated 22nd June, 1875. In 1878 his landlord sold the lands to the plaintiffs by registered deed, but in 1879 complained to the Mamlatdar that he had been cheated by the plaintiffs who, he alleged, had not paid the purchase-money. This allegation the plaintiffs denied. In September, 1881, the defendant brought a suit against the plaintiffs, in which he prayed for a declaration that the sale of the land to the plaintiffs was fraudulent, and that no consideration had been paid This suit, however, was withdrawn by the defendant on the 15th November, 1881, with leave to bring a fresh suit, but no fresh suit was brought by him within three years from November, 1881, nor was any suit brought by the plaintiffs' vendors to set aside their sale to the plaintiffs. In 1883 the plaintiffs brought this suit against the defendant to recover R960 as arrears of rent for four years for the lands described in their plaint. They alleged that the lands in question had been sold to them on the 12th September, 1878, and that the lands mentioned in their plaint had been leased on the 22nd June, 1875, to the defendant by their (the plaintiffs') vendors, and that in that lease the defendant had contracted to pay R240 annually. The defendant in his defence again raised the question whether the sale to the plaintiffs was not fraudulent and without consideration. Held, that the right of the defendant to plead as a defence to this suit, that the plaintiff's purchase of the 12th September was fraudulent and void, was barred. As a tenant he had no independent right to impeach the sale by his own landlords. He could only do so with their consent, assuming it to be still open to them to impeach it. But their complaint to the Mamlatdar in 1879 showed that they were then acquainted with the facts which entitled them to set aside the sale, and by the end of 182 at the latest, their right to file a suit for that purpose was therefore barred. Their right to impeach the sale by suit being thus barred, their tenant (the defendant) could not be allowed to impeach it as a defence to an action by the plaintiffs JUGALDAS v AMBASHANKAR . . I. The defendant and another brother (A) carried on a separate business under the name AH. In December 1866 B became insolvent and his property vested in the Official Assignee The present suit was brought in 1887 against the defendant by the Official Assignee to recover certain property which he alleged belonged to the insolvent and ought to be distributed among his creditors. The plaintiff alleged that in 1865 the insolvent was possessed of a very large amount of property, and that, being unwilling to meet his liabilities, he and his son and his two brothers, viz, A and the defendant R, fraudulently concealed his property from his creditors and in September 1866 he himself went to Daman, beyond British jurisdiction. In 1881 the plaintiff, having obtained information that some of insolvent's property was in the possession of his brother A filed a suit (No. 473 of 1881) against A to recover it. That suit was referred to arbitration, and the plaintiff obtained a decree for R3,60,000 The plaintiff now alleged that shortly before the hearing of that suit and subsequently, he had obtained information which led him to believe that the defendant had obtained some of the insolvent's property for which he was accountable. The defendant had been made a party to the former suit, No. 473 of 1881, for the purpose of discovery only, and it was in the course of such discovery being given that some of the above information had been obtained The plaint then set forth, in detail, the various items of claim in respect of which the plaintiff sought to make the defendant liable The defendant pleaded that the claims were barred by limitation. Held, by SCOTT, J, that the suit was not barred by limitation. The plaintiff presented an application on the 14th July, 1903, for execution of the decree for the whole amount alleging that the default contemplated had occurred. To this the defendant submitted a written statement signed by himself, bearing date the 28th September, 1903, wherein he contended that the decree for the whole amount could not be executed, inasmuch as with reference to the second instalment he had deposited its amount with a third person and had given a notice to the plaintiff asking him to take the amount from the third person. As to the third instalment, his submission was that he had no means to pay its amount then and time should therefore be granted to him. The Court held that three defaults had not occurred and dismissed the darkhast. On the 24th September, 1906, the plaintiff gave another darkhast to recover the amount of the aforesaid two instalments, which remained unpaid. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the darkhast as time-barred. Held, that the statement by the defendant as to the second instalment was an acknowledgment of liability within the meaning of s. 19 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). Held, further, that the statement [illegible]

It was pleaded that the suit was barred by limitation, to which plaintiff replied that the receipt of rent was in fact a payment of interest, and that from the last payment of interest a new period of limitation arose. Held, that, the case being governed by the provisions of Act IX of 1871, the payment of rent under an agreement entirely independent of the original mortgage could not be regarded as a payment of interest UMMEF KUTTI v ABDUL KADAR . In respect of a proportionate share of liability for money raised for this purpose one of the joint owners became liable to be sued by another of them for contribution; and a question arose as to the application of Art 61 of Sch II of the Limitation Act, 1877 More than three years before this suit all the joint owners had filed in Court a petition for the appointment of a manager of their estate who should, out of its profits, pay debts and interest to creditors from whom had been borrowed the money for the payment into Court. 15. ——— Payment of interest as such—Settlement of accounts To satisfy the requirements of s 20 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), the payment of principal or interest as such need not be in money It may be in goods or by a settlement of accounts between the parties, but the payment must be of such a nature that it would be a complete answer to a suit brought by the creditor to recover the amount Where a debtor consents that money due by him for interest should be credited to the account of the principal and the interest balance reduced by that amount such a consent is really tantamount to a payment of interest; it is as if the debtor makes the payment and the creditor advances it again.
